se of Patrick Roche, aged twenty-eight years, no died at the residence of his brother, corner of Friday week. The testimony showed that deceased was at work in Hibernia, N. J., about the middle of September. One evening he was at a liquor store, where a Mrs. Gent met him and accused him of owing her money. They became engaged in a quarrel, and finally clenched, in which one Thomas Flannery perticipated. They were finally separated. Later in the day, while passing Mr. Gent's house, deceased was called in and the fight was renewed. Mrs. Gent's husband, James, participating. Dennis Stamons, who saw the fight, testified that he heard a blow struck, but whether by Mr. or Mrs. Gent he does not know, and saw deceased fall. The day following Mrs. Gent said she wished he had got more, and intimated that she had inflicted the liquides. The jury found that the deceased came to his death from injuries received at the hands of James Gent or his wife Bridget. The Coroner sent he papers to Superintendent Keiso, by him to be forwarded to the police authorities of New Jersey, with a view of causing the arrest of Gent and his wife.
